The hygiene and security committee (CHS) of Paris city's cultural management voted this measure.

That's what was announced Friday by SUPAP-FSU syndicate and two environmental Associations. They have subjected to a vote "The motion asking a moratorium for the Wi-Fi development in libraries and museums after they recorded Wi-Fi sanitary effects». The associations put forward the genotoxic effects from Wi-Fi frequency

According to associations, many library peoples connected to this wireless technology testified of disorders like headache, dizziness, uneasiness, muscular pain due to 2 450 MHz waves.

Abstentions of CHS from CFDT at meeting, of the deputy Mayor in charge of culture, of Paris Mayor and of the administration representatives have allowed the motion to be adopted, the association and SUPAP-FSU congratulated themselves.

However, the vote "must be followed by a politic decision of this moratorium implement", they recognised.

Ecology and health ministries requested a report on radiations, especially Wi-Fi to the French Agency for environmental security and work (AFSSET). The general manager, Michele Froment-Vedrine, was pointing out : "It's a very controversial subject with a very emotional part".
