Mobile phones and real pandemics

05 01 2010 by Serge Sargentini of Next-up Organisation

Can the adage, "Everything that is exaggerated is unimportant" be applied to the present avalanche in the media across the Atlantic of dire warnings affecting the 400 million people who use mobile phones? At long last the Americans are waking up to the fact that they have been completely misled about the dangers of exposure to nearby sources of artificial microwave radiation coming from their "precious mobile phones".

Considering the evidence from scientific studies which almost all come to the same alarming conclusions, it is highly probable that a genuine pandemic is brewing that will impact 400 million phone users, a stupendous number.

Unlike France, where the silence in the media is deafening, in the USA politicians are looking seriously at the latest scientific findings, while explanatory articles giving exact figures are multiplying [\[eg: Debate still raging over cell phone link\]](#) and scientific information is getting a new look [\[vidéo\]](#).

Paradoxically it is still the WHO that is the center of the controversy. This pandemic of brain tumours is not a figment of the imagination, it is going to have a massive impact, most of all on young people, who for the most part ignore basic safety advice, such as avoiding the danger area of radiation emitted by the antenna of their mobile phone. However this safety measure is explained in black and white in the instruction leaflets issued by the manufacturers, followed by - guess what - a complete disclaimer of their responsibility.

Nokia for instance says this in its safety advice:

"... this apparatus conforms to the regulations concerning exposure to radio frequencies [ie. artificial HF microwaves] when used in its normal position against the ear or [such precision!] at a distance of at least 2.2cm from the body".

How has it arisen, this catastrophe that is going to hit young people the hardest?

The story starts several years ago. Since the mobile phone manufacturers did not want to follow the same thorny path as the tobacco companies, they took the initiative by getting a firm grip on the supposedly official world health system.

Something not too unlike "a mafia network" was put in place by a key player, Michael Repacholi, the person in charge of the WHO study programme on electromagnetic fields. Obviously this appointment only continued with the approval of successive directors of the WHO, and in fact the present director, Margaret Chang, has always been a faithful supporter of Repacholi.

Since this arrangement did not look entirely convincing, this same crook Repacholi, the puppet of the manufacturers, set up the pseudo-scientific organisation ICNIRP to rubber-stamp the recommendations from WHO - the very ones that he had himself issued!

As a barrier against any possible interference, Michael Repacholi was even, in violation of WHO statutes, made the Founder-President of ICNIRP, a scandal for a public servant!

In these conditions a "well-oiled" system could keep going indefinitely! All that remained was to convince other countries to adopt the ICNIRP standards in full confidence, since they were based on the WHO recommendations. And that's just what happened in the other principal countries in the world.

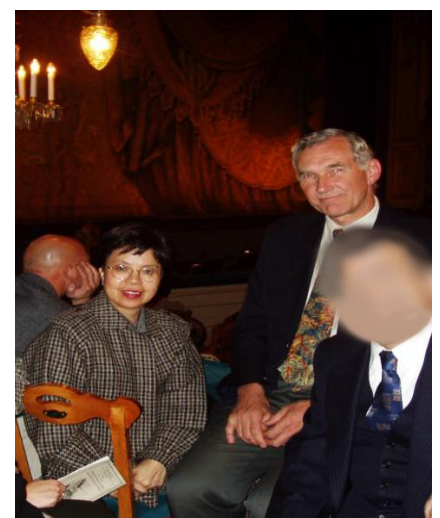

In France Repacholi's main "lieutenant" is Bernard Veyret and even if he has "been evicted or has disappeared" from the main French health organisations, unfortunately he still shows his face on the other side of our frontiers.

Fact: the hypothalamus, the thalamus, the hippocampus, the pituitary gland and the pineal gland irradiated by microwaves from a mobile!

In short it is the WHO, hand in hand with ICNIRP, that is directly responsible for knowingly creating a new type of planet-wide environmental pollution through its recommendations for radiation limits that are far too lax and unrealistic.

But in this new year of 2010, the health problems caused by the microwave radiation from mobile phones are headed for a massive increase, and once again it is the WHO that is largely responsible.

As for the H1N1 flu, the WHO is now being accused of having knowingly created a phony pandemic - but will this false one, tragically, lead the way to a new one that is all too real?

The authorities in charge of the world's health have not paid enough attention, through ignorance or lack of serious enquiry, to the complex interactions between the constituents of the H1N1 vaccine and the human metabolism.

The whole human system functions thanks to bio-electromagnetism, and anything artificial transgresses and reacts with the fundamental physico-chemical laws of bio-electromagnetic balance that control the human metabolism. This is one source of the symptoms of Microwave Syndrome.

Consequently, injecting into the bodies of a large part of the population additives containing metals such as aluminium hydroxide and others intended to activate immune defenses can only be called criminal ignorance.

De facto, and I weigh my words, there are now two categories of people in the world, which is not racism, but the cruel truth: those who have been vaccinated against the H1N1 flu, and the rest.

In France this category represents about 5 million people, who now have in their bodies a physiological anomaly (comparable to a poison) that will never leave them. Once the poisons interact with the new artificial environmental pollution from HF microwave radiation, these metallic neurotoxins will trigger in some people an insidious process of degeneration that will mostly affect the central nervous system.

Are we on the threshold of a health catastrophe? We believe so, whatever Madame Roselyne Bachelot-Narquin, Minister of Health, might think.

How many future generations will recount this terrible tale?
